

Director of Development
University of New Mexico School of Engineering

The UNM Foundation seeks nominations and applications for an experienced, results-oriented individual with significant, successful major gift experience for the position of Director of Development for the University of New Mexico School of Engineering. The successful applicant will join a team of professionals in implementing a comprehensive development program. The candidate will work closely with the Senior Director of Development, faculty, staff, volunteers, and friends to identify prospects, develop strategies leading to solicitation, and steward major donors.

This is an exceptional opportunity for an analytical, goal-oriented fundraising professional to provide strong leadership in designing and implementing a strategic program for annual support and to conduct major gift solicitations. Bachelor's Degree and five (5) or more years of fundraising or related experience is required. The successful candidate will need to demonstrate success in securing major gifts. Preference will be given to candidates who have functioned in a large university and/or academic medical environment. Travel is required. Capital campaign experience is preferred.
